

Questions to Ask a Reference About a Young Man

Your research should provide enough information to determine if the shiduch has some potential. The young people date to really find out about each other.

Make up your own questions.

- What is important for you that you want to find out? (What about that is important to you?) Form questions to that end.
  - Family - Yichus, siblings off the derecho, stringencies, politics
  - Personality/ Character – what are traits she really would like in a spouse/ what are some things that she really doesn't want

Opening the Conversation

- Introduce yourself, using your name.
- “Is now a good time to talk about X?” “When would be a good time to talk for about 7 minutes about X?” Respect their time, stick to 7 minutes; you do not have to ask every reference all these questions.
- “I am looking into this shiduch for my daughter (or whomever). Can I tell you a little about her, so we can make this conversation as productive as possible?” This is an opportunity for networking; even if this shiduch idea doesn't pan out, s/he may have another idea. Additionally, it makes her feel more comfortable to share. Lastly, s/he can help you determine if this shiduch idea is compatible.

Context in which the reference knows the person

“How do you know him?”

- If s/he last knew her more than 2 years ago, look for a more recent reference; young people change during these years.
- Only ask questions that are relevant to the context in which they know each other (ex: do not ask a boss about social life or family).

Values/ Hashkafa

- “Please describe his values and hashkafa.” Depending on the young lady for whom you are doing research, you might ask specific questions.
  - “What does he do on Shabbos?” “Level of kosher?”
  - Davening with a minyan, learning, farbrengens, going to Ohel, mitzvaim. Semicha, mikvah
  - Attitude to Yiddishkeit and Chasidus.

Middos

- Ask for examples, not hypothetical. “Tell me about a time when ...”
- Ask for slash words. “When you say ‘independent’, what does that look like? Please give me some other words so I can really get a sense of what you are describing.”
- “When it comes to middos, which 3 middos highlight who he is? Some examples might be: generosity, integrity, kindness, respect, always growing, responsible, reliable, dependable.” Ask for examples.

Family

“Tell me a little about the family.”

- “What was their family life like when he was growing up?” Ask for examples.
- Shalom Bayis, reasonable expectations from the children, involvement in the community, trauma that might have impacted her.
- “What is their Shabbos table like?” This can give you some indication of religiosity and community mindedness.
- “What role did/does his father have in the family?”
- “How close is he to his family?”

- “What might it be like for a new daughter-in-law to join the family?”
- “Are they are close family?” “Do they do things together? What type of things?”
- “Do the new in-laws already in the family feel close to the family?”
- Be realistic about your own family.

How he hold herself?

“Tell me about how he holds himself. What does he look like?”

- “What is his beard like?”
- “Please describe his levush/ style of dress.” Be sure you are clear on what is described to you.
- “Does he smoke? In what context?”
- “Does he drink? In what context?”

Goals/ Visions for Life

- “What are his plans for life?” “Does he see himself on shlichus? Working? Pursuing a career?”
- “What is he doing toward that?”
- “Where does he hope to live?”

Medical/Health

- “Does he have any medical conditions?” “How does he maintain it?” “If relevant, can we speak to his doctor?”
- Do not dismiss a viable shiduch because she has a medical condition. Learn more about it first.

What makes him ‘him’?

- “What drives him?” Ask for examples.
- “If you had to choose 3 words to describe him, what words might you say?” Ask for examples.
- “What does he like to when/if he had free time?”
- “Who is he similar to? Who in the community does he remind you of?”

Human flaws.

- “Everyone is human. What might be something that his wife would have to ‘live with’?” “What does it look/ feel like?” Ask for examples.
- “How might his roommate describe him?”

For a shiduch

- “What kind of woman do you think best suits him?”
- “What are absolute deal breakers for him?”
- “In your opinion, do you think he [would respect his excitement for taking care of special needs children in her free time]?” You can ask about something that is important to her.
- “Similarly, is there anything that is important to him that he would really want his wife to accept or respect?”

Sum up

- “Who else might know him?”
- “So what I heard is that X,Y,Z. Did I get that right?”
- “Is there anything else I should be asking about?”
- “Thank you for your time.”

Other words you might use throughout the conversation

- “Should I be reading between the lines here?”
- “What do you mean by that?”
- “Tell me more.”
- “What does that look/feel like?” “How does that play out?”

The information uncovered during research should never be relied on 100%. Everything must be confirmed during the dating process.
